QUIET RESTORED, WORKERS RETURN, SHOPS ALL OPEN

Clash Of Paraders And Police Thursday Night Has No Aftermath

IDENTIFY VICTIM

Indications Point That Students Had No Part In Mob's Action

HEAR WILD TALES

Poisoning Reports Sent To Police Found To Be Groundless

Quiet is apparently restored throughout the Settlement.

Last night brought no trouble for extra police, special constables and volunteers ordered out in order that no echoes of the Shantung Road affray of Thursday night might be heard. The police did not relax vigilance; Sikh troopers were detailed for Central, Louza and Hongkew Stations and the defense forces and special constables not on duty were standing by but there was no trouble.

All shops and stores are open, the markets are again doing business, with the exception of Hongkew meat dealers who expect to resume today; all workmen have returned to their factories with the exception of those employed at the Kung Hsing Iron Works and there were no further attempts at celebrations either yesterday afternoon or last night.

Detectives were still investigating the Shantung Road fracas and the inquest over the body of San Kwesung, who was killed, was started, an adjournment having been taken until Monday. The dead man was identified after the inquest adjourned, the victim's wife claiming the body late yesterday afternoon. San was a shoemaker, 27 years of age and a native of Chinkiang. On Thursday night he left his home in the Native City to get work in Canton Road, his wife told the police.

Meeting Preceded Fatal Parade

As the investigation progresses, the charges that the parade was started by and composed of students are refuted. It is learned that a meeting of 400 students, shopkeepers' assistants and laborers was held at the Public Recreation Ground, near the West Gate in the Native City at three o'clock in the afternoon. There were three speakers, representing the Kiangsu Educational Association, the Commercial Federation and a commercial association of the French Concession. The speakers advised the members to disperse but others insisted that there should be a parade by the shops of both Settlements to show that the efforts of the merchants were appreciated.

Later two other groups entered the Recreation Ground, one made up of 40 uniformed Chinese and the other being composed of merchants. Shortly before five o'clock one group marched to the An Sz Yen Temple near the South Gate and here a meeting was held which was attented by 1,000 people and addressed by ten speakers.

Advises Against Parade

President Ho Pau-zung of the Students' Union presided. He urged his hearers not to parade and when a decision to hold a procession was assured he and other students left the meeting. It continued until 6:30 o'clock. Some students remained, it is said.

Shortly after 6:30 o'clock a procession formed and passed through Boulevard de Deux Republiques into Rue Hue and was dispersed by French and Annamite police at the Great World.

Another parade of 500 marchers was stopped by French police at Rue Hue and Rue de Consulat, the procession breaking into three sections, marchers entering Rue Hue, Rue Tourance and Rue Moulin. French police were able to stop and disperse the groups on Rue Hue and Rue Moulin but those coming down Rue Tourance crossed the boundary into the Settlement and marched down Avenue Edward VII on the north side.

Checked At Fukien Road

The parade attempted to enter Fukien Road and was stopped by three Chinese police constables. When it passed the police box west of Shantung Road, Central Station was notified. Then the marchers entered Shantung Road and the clash with the police followed.

It is said that some of the marchers wore white hats but the police state

Premier At Peking Is Out; Minister Of Finance Acting

Understood That Chou Shui-mou Has Been Asked And Has Agreed To Form New Cabinet

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, June 13.—It is officially reported that the Premier's resignation has been accepted and the Minister of Finance is acting as Premier pending the appointment of a new Cabinet.

It is understood that Chou Shui-mou has been asked and has agreed to form a Cabinet. Chou Shui-mou was formerly Civil Governor of Heilungkiang, has twice been President of the Administrative Court and is a friend of President Hsu Shih-chang. In some way he is connected with the Anfu Club, if not an active member.

The Anfu Club is endeavoring to secure the appointment of Li Shen-to, the President of the Senate, as Minister for Foreign Affairs.

Peking is very quiet but is seething with intrigues.

Militarists Are Plotting

Peking, June 12.—The situation in Peking is much easier today. As yet the Militarists have made no fresh move and there is reason to believe they realise that their troops cannot be depended on and that any move calling for action will probably entail as much danger for the promoter as for the intended opponents.

Political leaders are very busy and intrigues are rampant still, but apprehension is notably lessened.

Premier's Resignation Accepted, Says Message From Peking

The resignation of Premier Chien Nung-hsun was accepted yesterday, according to a Peking telegram last night. Mr. Chung Hsin-cheng, Minister of Finance, was appointed Acting Premier, while the services of the other Ministers were retained, although the resignation of the entire Cabinet en bloc was tendered Thursday evening. A great deal of speculation is evident as to the possible successor of Premier Chien. The proteges of General Tuan Chi-jui are again active to name him Premier for the fourth time.

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Brussels, June 5.—The new Rhenish Republic has been well received in the occupied zone.

Dr. Dorten, the new President, has proclaimed a general election on a basis of universal suffrage for men and women over twenty.

The occupation authorities are not participaing in the conflict.

ADMIRALTY DESIGNATES BRITISH NAVAL STATIONS

Boundaries Will Be Somewhat Like What They Were Before The War

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, June 5.—The Admiralty has issued instructions revising the boundaries of the naval stations from June 1 except provisionally in the case of the new Australian station, the limits of which have not yet been finally settled with regard to the dividing line between it and the China station on the one hand and between it and the New Zealand station on the other.

A great change is effected in the distribution of the fleet as compared with the situation during the German menace, before which it was customary to have a battle fleet in the Far East. "It may be assumed," says the Times naval correspondent, "that such a policy will shortly commend itself again."

Dominions' Navies Factor

To some extent the stations on which the squadrons will be distributed remain as before the war. The rise of Dominion navies introduces a new feature which is bound to extend its influence in time. Neither Canada nor South Africa yet possesses a sea-going fleet but the limits of the station of the British forces in their waters would probably be unchanged if they provided themselves with navies. Apparently the scheme of division is framed in order to allow for the future development of Dominion fleets.

The North-America and West Indies station now embraces the waters of both the Atlantic and Pacific seaboards, the Panama Canal forming the connecting link.

Similarly the South-America station extends into both oceans, including on the Pacific side the waters of Chile and Peru.

The vast expanse of the Pacific Ocean is thus divided among not fewer than five stations. Further developments are fairly certain and it will not be difficult to revive a Pacific Squadron, possibly with headquarters at Herbertshoehe, in New Britain.

The Home Station

The Home station is naturally the most important of the nine into which the oceans are divided and the force commissioned for that station comprises both the Atlantic and Home fleets and, of course, the reserve squadrons and flotillas. Although one of the smallest stations, it reaches northward into the Arctic Sea and southward to a little above the Cape Verde Islands; westward nearly to the longitude of Cape Farewell, in Greenland, and naturally includes the North Sea and the Baltic.

The next most important station is the Mediterranean, the only other station at present on which our force includes a battle squadron. The headquartters of this station is Malta and it extends from the Straits of Gibraltar to the Straits of Bab-el-Mandeb comprising therefore the whole of the Mediterranean and the Red Sea. This force also supplies the representation of the British navy in the Black Sea and the Sea of Azof.

BRITAIN DEALING WITH CONGESTION OF CABLES

Only Important Messages Of Government Take Precedence Now Over Others

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, June 5.—In the House of Commons today at question-time, Mr. A. H. Illingworth stated that owing to the congestion of the Eastern Telegraph Company's cables, arrangements had recently been made to suspend priority of transmission for Government telegrams, except really urgent ones. Consequently Government telegrams are now delayed with in a similar manner to commercial telegrams and special steps are being taken to reduce their number and length. He admitted that many messages to Australia are taking ten to twelve days. The cable to Gibraltar had been restored but faults in one or two prevented their full use. The American-Pacific cable was still interrupted but it was hoped that it would be repaired in a few days, thus somewhat relieving the congestion to the Far East. Mr. R. A. Sanders stated that the Government is giving attention to the question of permitting business cablegrams to be sent in private codes.

ESSENTIAL PARTS OF PEACE TREATY TO BE UNCHANGED

Clauses On Saar Valley And Rhine Bank Not To Be Modified

DISCUSS FRONTIER

Rectification To Be Make Of Border Line Of Upper Silesia

WORK IS SPEEDED

All Commissions Asked To Hasten Completion Of Their Reports

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Paris, June 7.—All of the Commissions are in session, as a result of orders from the Big Four to speed up the peace terms as much as possible.

Frontiers Are Discussed

Paris, June 6.—According to French diplomatic circles the general line of the Upper Silesian frontier will not be changed but several rectifications will be made, affecting some villages containing a few thousand inhabitants. A special commission is examining the question.

As regards the Saar Valley and the occupation of the left bank of the Rhine, there will be no alteration to the original clauses of the draft Treaty.

Concerning The Indemnity

The Council of Four may perhaps fix, but only approximately, the total amount of the indemnity to be demanded from Germany under the head of Reparations. The discussions of the last two days have shown that no difference of views exists among the Allies who are unanimously of opinion that the terms of the Treaty must be upheld.

It is hoped that the reply to the German counter-proposals will be handed to the German Delegation on the 13th. The Germans will be given a minimum of three days and a maximum of five days in which to announce their acceptance or non-acceptance.

Paderewski Protests

Paris, June 6.—M. Paderewski has protested to the Council of Four against any changes in the Silesian settlement.

According to L'Echo de Paris certain suggestions made by Mr. Lloyd George regarding the frontier of Upper Silesia will perhaps be adopted.

Council Urges Haste

Paris, June 5.—The Council of Four has issued positive instructions to all the Commissions that they must complete their reports on the German counter-proposals by Monday.

Essential Conditions Unchanged

Paris, June 5.—The Council of Four today continued the discussion of the German counter-proposals. It seems probable that any changes will only involve the procedure for carrying out the terms, without in the lightest affecting the Allies' essential conditions. It is apparently certain that Germany will not be represented on the Reparations Committee and will not be permitted to restore the devastated regions herself.

Le Journal states that the Allies have adopted a compromise between the Belgian and Dutch standpoints with regard to the revision of the Treaty of 1839, which takes into consideration the Dutch desire to preserve the integrity of their territory.

The newspapers state that the Council of Four has decided to summon the Turkish plenipotentiaries to participate in the negotiations with regard to the fate of the Ottoman Empire.

Views Of Financiers

Paris, June 5.—Allied financiers express the opinion that the Reparations section of the Treaty is unsatisfactory owing to the sums to be expected from Germany not being specified. As individual nations must be prepared to make a complete financial statement to bankers in order to obtain loans, it is expected that the sum of a hundred billion gold marks will be specified, this being the sum agreed by the Entente financial experts as what Germany could probably pay. This alteration in the Treaty is regarded as a detail which will make the Treaty more workable and facilitate the great loans necessary for the restoration of the war-worn countries.

Treaty Suits Wilson

Paris, June 6.—According to Le Matin, President Wilson, after examining in detail the German counter-proposals, declared: "Our treaty violates none of my principles. I should not hesitate to confess it if I thought otherwise and try to retrieve the error, but the treaty which we have drawn up entirely accords with my fourteen points."

Protest Against Republic

Berlin, June 4.—Herr Erzberger has handed Marshal Foch a second note which argues that the Entente's toleration of treasonable machinations in Rhenish territory violates Article V. of the armistice and, furthermore, expecting the Entente to facilitate the prosecution of the principal traitors for high treason, which was inaugurated by the Supreme Attorney at Leipzig, and to permit arrests and removal for trial.

Opinion In Austria

Vienna, June 3.—While the newspapers unanimously declare that the peace terms for Austria are impossible and unacceptable, it is not suggested that the Treaty should not be signed but it is hoped that the Austrian delegaes will be able to obtain better terms.

Indemnity Not Stated

Paris, June 5.—The financial terms of the Austrian Treaty, as completed, do not specify the sum for reparation, but leaves it to a commission to examine the resources of Austria and to determine the amount and method of the payments.

LLOYD GEORGE DENIES REPORT ABOUT TREATY

Pressure Not Put On Premier To Have Terms Modified To Favor Germany

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, June 5.—In the House of Commons today Mr. Ronald McNeill drew attention to the report that certain Labor leaders and influential personages had put pressure on Mr. Lloyd George to modify the peace terms favorably to Germany.

Mr. Bonar Law, replying, gave an assurance that neither the Premier nor any other British delegate would be influenced by any particular interest but would be guided by what they believed to be public interest. The Premier certainly had not seen Mr. Ramsay MacDonald or Mr. Arthur Henderson. To the best of his knowledge, the Premier had consulted only the British and Oversea delegates in Paris and a considerable number of his colleagues in the government who went to Paris expressly in order to confer with him.

Denial Is Authorised

London, June 6.—The attention of the Prime Minister having been called to Mr. McNeill's question in the House of Commons, he authorised a denial that he has had any communication of the nature indicated with Mr. Ramsay MacDonald or Mr. Arthur Henderson or that any pressure by persons of political or financial influence has been brought on him to modify the peace terms in a manner favorable to Germany.

AMERICAN TUNNEL BLAST KILLS MANY WORKERS

Broken Trolley Ignites Truck Of Powder Carrying Load Of Miners To Work

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Wilkesbarres, Pa., June 5.—An appalling explosion of a truck of black powder which was attached to an electric train conveying men to work resulted in 69 killed and 40 injured.

After the train entered a tunnel the trolley wire broke and fell and sparks ignited the powder. The explosion was terrific and was followed by flames, which caused the greatest loss of life, while other men were suffocated. The disaster followed a night of rejoicing in celebration of the home coming of soldiers from France. Hundreds of shrieking women and children, terrified at the awful spectacle, gathered at the mouth of the tunnel. The catastrophe was due to careless violation of mine laws prohibiting the transport of men on trains carrying explosives.

San Francisco After-School Club On Tour To Give Variety Show

Forty-two members of the Columbia Park Boy's Club of San Francisco, who are on a trip to Australia, will arrive here from Japan on the Tamba Maru on June 21. The young men are variety entertainers and will play a short engagement at the Astor House Palm Garden.

Major S. S. Peixotto of San Francisco, who is in charge of the party, instituted the education-by-travel idea some years ago. He organised the Columbia Park Boys' Club and directed tours to Australia and the South Seas in 1910 and a 36,000-mile trip around the world in 1913-1914.

The organisation is an after-school club and the membership is made up of boys between the ages of 12 and 19 years of age.

In addition to the addresses the business of the annual meeting will be transacted and there will be a discussion following the talks. Although the meeting is primarily for members others especially interested in the subjects to be spoken on have been invited to attend. The meeting will be preceded by a dinner, the cost of which will be $1.50 per plate.

RETURNED SERVICE MEN TELL WAR EXPERIENCES

Large Audience Hears Program Given Under Auspices Of Local Societies

The Masonic Hall was filled almost to capacity last night for the program of talks by British returned army men given under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Society and Royal Society of St. George.

Interecting accounts of operations of several branches of the service on the Western front and in Palestine were given by Major M. Reader Harris, M.C., of the 13th London Regiment; Major M. H. Logan, M.C., of the Royal Engineers; Captain Allister St. Clair Campbell, of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, and Lieutenant E. H. McMichael, of the Westminster Dragoons.

The meeting was presided over by Sir Havilland de Sausmarez, who, in his introductory speech, welcomed the returned men back in the name of the societies and called upon the audience to remember that world peace had not yet been accomplished and to keep in mind the men who were still fighting in Russia and Siberia, where the Bolshevik menace and the danger of further German machinations still threatened.

Major Harris in entertaining style, and with an appreciative humorous touch, developed the topic of the ordinary offensive on the West front, beginning with the "symptoms" of the impending dash for the enemy trenches and describing the sensations experienced and the conditions to be overcome.

Major Logan dealt with the work of the "sapper" and told of the hazardous work of the engineering field companies along the front, particularly citing experiences in the Ypres salient, where in the winter of of 1915-1916 practically the whole front line had to be rebuilt, under hazardous conditions.

Capt. Campbell and Lieut. McMichael described operations in Palestine and Lieut. McMichael illustrated several phases of the campaign in this theater with an interesting collection of photographic slides and maps.

A collection was taken during the evening in aid of the United Service Association.

UFA IS STORM CENTER OF BOLSHEVIST STRIFE

Religious Movement Is New Danger That Is Menace For Soviet Regime

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Omsk, June 10.—Ufa is the arena of a very severe struggle and is passing from hand to hand and being alternately bombarded by both sides. At present the Siberians hold the town.

It is reported from authentic sources that the Soviet regime is menaced by a new danger from within, for a religious movement has recently sprung up. In the central and northern Governments, particularly in the Governments of Moscow, Novgorod and Vladimir, the movement has taken the form of Adventism. The peasants say the day of wrath has come and Lenin is the prophesied Anti-Christ. The Soviet authorities already recognise the gravity of the movement and are combatting it with propaganda but they have ceased prosecuting the clergy because they fear the indignation of the masses.

Report From Don Region

Harbin, June 12.—General Sicheff has recently arrived from the Don and has made a detailed report upon the situation in the Don region to the Council of Ministers.

He states the Don Government has proclaimed the same ideals as the Omsk Government and will work in full agreement with the latter. The Cossacks have decided not to lay down their arms before they reach Moscow and clear their country from the enemies of mankind.

General Horvath after a three days' visit to Harbin is leaving for Vladivostok this evening.

The Bill was seconded unanimously.

STRIFE IN AFGHANISTAN IS NOT YET SUPPRESSED

Forces Dispersed By Air Raids On Jellalabad Reported Returning In Parties

Simla, June 10.—The Afghans who were dispersed near the villages are reported to have been returning in small parties to Jellalabad since our air-raids ceased.

Afridi outlaws and other bad characters have established themselves in Kajuri, south of Jamrud, and made some minor raids in the Peshawar district. The withdrawal of the Afghan troops at Palwar has commenced, presumably on receipt of orders to cease fighting.

Our Tochi column is continuing punitive measures against offending Wazir villages. A special column reached Jandola on the 9th unopposed. The garrison was well and had sustained only a few casualties. They severely punished the enemy with their rifle and gun-fire.

ADVANCE OF ESTHONIANS IN LETTLAND CONTINUES

Recent Reports Of Capture Of Petrograd Are Said To Be Premature

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Copenhagen, June 4.—An Esthonian communique states:

The Esthonian troops in Eastern Lettland continue their victorious forced marches against Kreutzburg on the Dvina. They captured 1,900 prisoners, a heavy battery and a number of machine-guns on June 1 and 2.

The reports continually appearing in the press about the capture of Petrograd are very premature. Vigorous counter-attacks by Bolsheviki west and northwest of Gatchina continue and their repulse by our Northern Corps has not yet achieved a decisive result.

Nothing is known at Esthonian headquarters of the Finnish advance on Petrograd from the north.

Similarly, west of the Luga on the Petrograd-Pskoff Railway our Northern Corps is solely engaged in repelling attacks.

NEW NOTE TO KOLTCHAK FORWARDED BY ALLIES

Assurance Asked Government Will Carry Out Will Of Russian People

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, June 5.—Reuter's Agency learns that the Allies have addressed a note to Admiral Koltchak with a view to obtaining assurances that any government recognised by the Allies shall at the earliest opportunity ascertain the opinions of the Russian people as a whole and be prepared to carry them out. Furthermore the smaller Baltic States cannot be returned to their former conditions. There will probably be no objection to the desire of the Government of Russia to control the Baltic shores, provided the general status of these States is not prejudiced.

Railways and Industrial Concerns Are Encouraging Their Employes To Help

Washington, May 5.—The war gardeners of the United States, of whom there were more than 5,000,000 in 1918, have not ceased their activities because military operations have come to an end. They have turned their war gardens into Victory Gardens and are cultivating the back yards and vacant lots in cities and towns all over the country with as much patriotic enthusiasm as they showed during the war in growing food. Reports to the National War Garden Commission indicate that the final count will show more Victory Gardens in 1919 than there were war gardens in 1917 or 1918.

The Commission has continued its campaign for home food production this year because it realised the world need and that if America were to keep its promise to ship vast quantities of staples abroad there must be no let-up in the cultivation of all available land. On this account it called on the city farmer again this year to do his share, and the response has been remarkable. The home soldiers of the soil have shouldered their hoes and have gone into the gardens determined to beat enemy Hunger in the same way they helped to crush the Huns. The Commission again this year has furnished the press of the country with short daily garden lessons for the instruction of the home food growers. It has supplied free garden booklets to anybody who applies; and its posters have been displayed all over the country. It has also distributed hundreds of thousands of canning and drying booklets to aid in the conservation of all surplus garden products so that nothing go to waste.

Manufacturing and industrial concerns of all sorts, including the railroads, banks, chambers of commerce and other trade bodies, banks, libraries, women's clubs, state, county and city officials, local committees and other organisations have co-operated with the National War Garden Commission in spreading the message and urging upon the people the importance of continuing the work of increasing food supplies.

"One of the big features of the campaign has been the part taken by manufacturing companies in keeping up the interest in gardening among their employes," said Charles Lathrop Pack, President of the National War Garden Commission. "One concern whose men cultivated more than 100 acres of land furnished them last year by the company, with 2,000 more of the workers having gardens at their homes, reports that the undertaking is looked upon by the company and its employes as a permanent institution. This is typical of many reports received by the Commission. One big mining company with plants at different places in three states says that most of its 9,000 workers are interested in gardening and it is helping them. The 7,000 workers at the Rock Island Arsenal also have entered actively into the campaign. The United States Railroad Administration has co-operated closely with the Commission by placing posters in stations along the lines under its control and by distributing free garden books. Land along the rights-of-way not needed for railroad purposes has been turned over to the men for garden purposes and they are planting Victory Gardens everywhere. Among leading manufacturing concerns which are encouraging and assisting their men to garden are the American Woolen Company, the Carnegie Steel Company, the United Shoe Machinery Corporation, the General Electric Company, the American Rolling Mill Company, the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, the Eastman Kodak Company, and so on through a long list.

"Aside from its value as a food producer and as a means of helping to win the world food war and make secure the fruits of victory, the home garden has proved its worth and is being encouraged for other reasons. Banks realise that the man who plants a garden is thrifty and becomes a better customer and so they are helping through economic as well as patriotic reasons. The garden path leads to the bank counter, they know. Chambers of commerce and city beautification committees recognise that it makes for the added wealth and for the improvement of the community. The garden is being used in civic betterment work because it knits the home ties more securely. Gardening has been one of the features in the "own-home" campaign this year. In connection with the training and education of children and their encouragement to outdoor life, a more intensive campaign than ever has been carried on among the school children of the nation. They have been organised into the United States School Garden Army by the Federal Bureau of Education with which the National War Garden Commission has been co-operating closely.

"The returning soldier is thinking of food production because he realises perhaps better than anyone else how important it was in winning the war and how much the peoples abroad will need large food supplies for a long time to come. The Commission has received letters from soldiers in France and elsewhere and from American sailors asking that garden books be sent to their families at home. As the soldiers came back one of the first things many of them did was to start a little garden on some vacant plot. This has served as an inspiration to others to keep up the good work."

Many applications for information and data which have come to the Commission from foreign countries have been filled. These have come from all parts of the world. In a memorial volume which has been prepared by Charles Lathrop Pack, President of the National War Garden Commission, showing that the home "soldier of the soil" did as a war measure, the opinion is expressed that the war gardener, now transformed into a victory gardener, has come to stay.

Rumors Keep Police Working

A telephone message received at Hongkew Police Station early last night brought news of five deaths—the result of Japanese poisoning vegetables. Detectives could find no dead Chinese.

Soon after a like message brought the tale to Central Station only six had died this time.

Similar wild rumors were current all day yesterday—the Japanese were said to be either poisoning the wells or doping the chow. Notices scouting the rumors have been posted throughout the Settlement by the police.

H. Koya, who was arrested after police had been told that he was stabbing little children with an awl, was given seven days in prison. When he was arrested, an awl dropped from his clothes.

A fine of three yen and a sentence of two days in jail were given M. Nose for assaulting a ricsha coolie.

Story Of Fracas Told At Inquest Of Victim

The inquest over the body of the Chinese killed at the Shantung Road flare-up Thursday night was held yesterday afternoon in the Mixed Court before British Assessor Grant Jones and Magistrate Kwan. Evidence was given by Chief Inspector T. I. Vaughan, who shot the man; Trooper Sergeant E. C. Rock; Sergeant William Robertson, who was wounded on the forehead in the fracas; Inspector James Sinclair, Sergeant John Sullivan, Mr. W. Palmer of the public mortuary and C. P. C. 456, who sounded the first alarm. The inquest was adjourned to Monday morning to enable the police to identify the dead man.

The first witness called was a Chinese constable who stated that he was in charge of the telephone booth at the Southern end of Fukien Road and when he saw the paraders coming towards the Settlement telephoned to Louza station, which sent a detachment of foreign and Sikh police to check their entrance. When the paraders headed eastward, another telephone message was sent to Central Station..

Inspector Vaughan stated that he was making his rounds of the Central district with Inspector Sinclair when, at the corner of Canton and Shantung Roads, he saw the mounted troopers being forced back by the mob. He was unarmed. He saw various kinds of articles being thrown at the troopers. One table hit a Sikh, who fell from his horse. He realised the seriousness of the situation and decided to fire. He took the rifle from C. P. C. 1446 and fired three shots. Trooper Sergeant Rock then asked permission to fire and the permission was given.

Sergeant Rock's Story

Sergeant Rock testified that he was sent to the scene of trouble with four Indian troopers shortly after 9:05 last night. When the crowd refused to go back to the French Concession, he ordered his troopers to charge the crowd. They did, using the butt end of their lances to clear the street. They managed to press the crowd up to Avenue Edward VII. On returning the troopers cleared Canton Road. People began to throw cups, tables, shutters and poles from all sides and from the verandahs above. A Sikh was hit. He was knocked from his horse and his face was cut. He was in the hospital with a broken jaw, which resulted from attacks of the mob.

Sergeant Rock then said that he ordered his men to be more severe in clearing the road. The people from Avenue Edward VII had began to yell and shout. Voices of "Tang, Tang Nga Kuo Nyin" (Hit the foreigners) were heard. The Shantung Road was too crowded with debris to pass and the Sergeant ordered a retreat of the troopers to Canton Road. The mounted police retreated slowly fighting their way. He saw Inspectors Vaughan and Sinclair on Canton Road and told Vaughan what had happened. Vaughan obtained several rounds of ammunition from a Chinese constable and took his rifle and fired. Witness asked the Inspector to be allowed to fire and he fired seven shots with his Browning automatic. The first three were fired into the crowd and the next four were aimed at the people who threw the missiles at the police. At this time, he realised that he had no more ammunition. Inspector Vaughan, therefore, ordered him to get a supply from the Central Station. When witness returned, he saw that the crowd had not yet dispersed. Then the volunteers turned out and relieved him and his troopers.

Mr. Palmer testified that he saw Dr. Chang make the examination over the body of the deceased.

Sergeant Robertson said he was in the Central Station compound in civilian clothes when news of the trouble was received. He heard Sergeant Jefferson say that there was trouble on Shantung Road. He went to the scene with Sergeant Sullivan. He saw the troopers retreating when bombarded by chairs, shutters and other articles. He turned to Canton Road and saw the arrival of Inspectors Vaughan and Sinclair, about four foreign officers, six special constables and a dozen Sikh police. A chair was thrown at him and he sustained a cut on the forehead.

According to witness, Sergeant Rock fired first and as soon as he fired, Inspector Vaughan fired. He was sure that Rock fired before Vaughan did. When Rock fired, he was 20 yards away from Vaughan, witness said.

The Assessor read the record of the inquest which showed that Vaughan had stated that he took the rifle of C. P. C. 1446 and had fired into the crowd three times and then gave permission to Rock to fire.

Witness, in further answer to the Assessor, said he had neither fallen or was dazed. He did not feel dizzy, but had bled considerably. The Assessor remarked that as far as he could see, witness might be mistaken.

Sergeant Sullivan said that he was at Central Station with Robertson when news of the trouble came. When he saw the crowd hurling missiles at the police, he appealed to them and the throwing stopped for a time. He saw Inspector Vaughan fire first. He was then asked to get the entire available force of Sikh and foreign police at the Central Station so did not see Sergeant Rock shoot. He was convinced that Rock did not fire before Vaughan.

Inspector Sinclair said that he saw the Indian troopers being driven back by the crowd and realised the situation to be serious. Witness heard Rock asking permission to fire. The words used were: "Can I fire, sir?" and "Yes, certainly."

The Court said that, according to the Chinese press, the deceased was an apprentice of a wine shop. The assessor asked if the police had yet established the identity of the dead man.

Detective Sergeant Yorke replied that the police were investigating the report.

The inquest was then adjourned.

In the morning Assessor Grant Jones and Magistrate Kwan viewed the body of the deceased.

Mr. G. D. Musso, counsel for the Chinese Government, was asked by the Bureau of Foreign Affairs to watch the inquiry on its behalf but was unable to attend as he was engaged in another case.

Peking Students' Release Is Impressive Spectacle

Parade Out Of Courtyard Prison Led By A Band After Government's Apology

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, June 9.—June Eighth marked the close of a phase of the students' movement in Peking with an event which must be recorded to the score of the students, the triumphal march out of the Government University of over 11,000 students. Imprisoned under permit of martial law for pacific agitation, the students won their first victory when the soldiers were withdrawn from the institution where they were held, on June Sixth, in response to the demands from all parts of the city which flooded the Government offices and the increased agitation and universal striking of the student body in sympathy with their comrades. Imprisoned then voluntarily for thirty-six hours in protest against the high-handed methods of the officials, guarded by their own representatives, the students had spent altogether some three days in the confines of their once schoolhouse dedicated to the pursuit of "free and liberal knowledge."

On June Seventh a delegation was sent by the government acceding to the principal demand of the students for an apology. On receipt of this apology the students determined to cease their demonstration and to accept the apology as a sign of the returning rationality of the Government.

The parade was scheduled for eleven a.m. Sunday. Early in the morning the door to the Government Law School, which had been picketed off by hundreds of grey-clad soldiers two days before, was thronged with interested spectators and delegations of the unarrested students ready to welcome their friends from within. When vouched for by the principal of one of the striking schools I was allowed to receive a pass at the door and to enter by the student guards into the inner court. Here, in a square of some 300 feet the boys were lined up in double lines grouped according to schools running the length and breadth of the court. At the end of each group floated the flag of the school and often coupled with it the flag of the Republic. Some of the groups were uniformed, the School of Commerce in grey cloaks with pink roses; the Tsinghua boys in their khaki military suits and scouts uniforms, others with red or yellow paper roses. Great banners waved at one end of the court, where the procession was to start, and here and there little paper pennants waved. Some bore mottoes, with one of the two legends—"Buy native goods," or "Long live the Great Republic."

Along the background of the scene stretched the grey line of the "prison" building. Inside this building one could see the relics of the days' imprisonment—bags of bed clothing packed together to be taken out and morsels of food, half-eaten loaves and jars of water. In the far corner of the court my guide pointed out to me the students' administration building, where for two days orders had been issued from the central committee to the various school assemblies of the Peking Arrested Students' Organisation. Along the fence before it were pasted bulletins and various petitions that had been sent by organisations within and without to the government.

Suddenly we noticed that the Tsinghua line had formed and their band had also got in line. On the steps above the court a lad in khaki appeared and called through a megaphone for the representatives of each school to come forward. They gathered around him, one from each of the twenty-three schools, and he announced the order of march from his perch.

We left them there and went outside. It was nearly twelve o'clock before finally the blare of trumpets playing the first bars of the Chinese national air within the gates announced the coming forth of the prisoners.

The crowd pressed back, and on they came. It wasn't much as parades go. The enthusiasm of the crowd, even of the welcoming committees, had somewhat waned, and the onlookers, coolies and police, hardly knew why the parade was. The double line as it wavered past in its uneasy gait, with half-hearted waving of hats, and its pathetic motley of costumes, was not impressive to a foreigner used to the grand displays of war-time parades. It missed much of the dignity and spectacular order of the array within the court. But as the intelligent and earnest young faces appeared from under the shadow of their walls, which they had transmuted from walls of oppression to a stronghold of freedom, the very air around them seemed to tingle with the vibrant eagerness of youth, the fierce idealism that makes for unity, the strength that makes for power, the vision that shapes a brighter hope for a generation to come.

Notes Of The Strike

Threatening letters have been received by the compradore, coolie foremen and two assistants employed at the Nippon Yusen Kaisha. The communications state that unless the employes immediately sever their connections with the Japanese firm, bodily injury will be done them. The police are conducting an investigation.

Police of the International Settlement and the French Concession removed several photographs and cartoons of the Mikado of Japan yesterday. In many cases the pictures were mutilated.

Shopkeepers in Hongkew were restless for some reason or another yesterday morning. Merchants opened as usual early in the morning and then everything closed up as tight as a drum at nine o'clock. The shops reopened at eleven o'clock.

The case against seven Chinese charged by the police with the murder of Kwan Bei-kyeu, advisor to the Tuchun of Chekiang who was mistaken as a Japanese poisoning wells and killed by a mob in Gordon Road district, was remanded for special hearing yesterday in the Mixed Court. The accused include three farmers, two chauffeurs, one coppersmith and a tailor.

Kau Kyi-tsang, a shoemaker, was charged yesterday in the Mixed Court with obstructing Sergeant Robertson in the performance of his duties. The case was remanded till Monday in order to have the presence of Detective Inspector Eek, who saw the arrest of the accused by complainant after the latter had picked him out of a number of Chinese in a barber shop following the Shantung Road fracas of Thursday night.

Public School League

The Greens of the Public School Baseball League defeated the Reds after a long uphill struggle Friday by the score of 43 to 41. The Reds started out with a 16 run lead and it looked as though they had the game won. However, Captain Reid's aggregation gradually caught up and with a score of 12 in the eighth inning won out. The Reds had two on in the ninth with Goldman up but Onishi backed up for Goldman's long fly which was ticked for a homer and the game was over.

Caccia for the Greens and Goldman for the Reds were the batting stars, the latter hitting for extra bases almost every time up. Goldman, who is considered to be the best cricket batter in the school, is rapidly developing into a good baseball player. He bats sharply and fields well. Captain Schneider of the Reds fields his position well and is also a dangerous man with the stick.

The score:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	Total
Greens ...	0	8	5	3	5	2	5	12	3	43
Reds	16	4	1	2	6	3	0	2	7	41

Batteries:
Greens: Zellensky, Reid and Mahon.
Reds: Moosa, Goldman and Cooke.

NOTICE

Messrs. CROSSE & BLACKWELL much regret that for the first time for a hundred years war conditions prevent many of their products being shipped to China. They much appreciate the letters they are receiving, and in reply would state that it is fully recognised here that under the circumstances of life in China the absence of English delicacies and foods is a very real hardship.

Messrs. CROSSE & BLACKWELL will take care that not a day shall be lost in forwarding supplies when a return to more normal conditions permits. In the meantime they trust that those who have been accustomed to rely on their products will be good enough to accept this explanation.

(TRANSLATION)

Taking advantage of the campaign to secure the Boycott of Japanese goods, agitators and disorderly persons, who have no concern for the welfare of China, or of the residents of this Settlement, are endeavouring to foment trouble to suit their own ends preying upon peaceful merchants and residents.

It has therefore become necessary for the Council to take drastic action to preserve the peace and good order of the Settlement and to protect peaceful residents and merchants from the violence of such disorderly persons.

Warning is accordingly given:

1.—That the distribution of handbills of an inflamatory character and the exhibition of flags bearing characters which furnish a direct incitement to disorder, are prohibited. Contravention of this prohibition will be punished without the least leniency.

2.—That no credence should be given to rumours which are designed to stir up animosity and foment trouble. Several such rumours have been brought to the notice of the Council and upon investigation, have been found to be utterly baseless. The authors of, and those spreading such rumours will, upon detection, be punished without the least leniency.

3.—That the assembling of crowds in the streets of the Settlement will not be permitted. Those who have no legitimate business to attend to should not loiter on the streets or mix with the agitators and loafers who are bent on provoking trouble. During the evenings all peaceful residents should remain at Home. The Council will not be responsible for any injury or damage that may be sustained by any person contravening this order and advice.

Shopkeepers and merchants are advised to re-open to public business and in case of any intimidation to enforce the closing of their shops or places of business to report the same immediately to the nearest Police Station with a statement of the circumstances in detail, whereupon their assailants will be arrested and brought before the Court and severely punished without the least leniency.

Warning is duly given. Let all obey.

IMPARTIAL AND PROGRESSIVE

SHANGHAI, JUNE 14, 1919

An Explanation: Co-operation Between French And International Authorities

IN yesterday morning's editorial leader THE CHINA PRESS commented on a lack of co-operation between the French Concession and the International Settlement in the handling of Chinese celebratory parades after the winning of the strike. It said that the French Concession had permitted them and the International Settlement had forbidden them, thus making trouble inevitable. It made that statement with official authority. However, yesterday the Settlement authorities informed this paper that there had not been lack of co-ordination and that the French Concession had not permitted parades generally, and that the two Settlements had acted together throughout. M. Wilden, French Consul-General, in a formal letter given below makes the same statement. It needs no saying that there was no intention on the part of this paper to be unfair or misleading. If it has been, it wishes to express its regrets. It spoke with official authority, and that fact would indicate that at least a misunderstanding existed somewhere. M. Wilden's statement follows:

"In today's papers, when dealing with the incidents which happened last night, when a very numerous crowd was stopped by the police in Shantung and Fukien Roads, it has been said that processions were allowed to circulate in the French Concession, while they were forbidden in the Settlement. This is not the case. It is true that yesterday, 12th, at 2 p.m. a procession of about 50 students was allowed, on the request of the merchants, to walk through the Concession. But, in the same time, several applications of the same kind, for the night, were refused and special instructions given to the police to stop and disperse all processions. It was done without much difficulty, in three or four occasions. Unfortunately, at about 9:30 p.m., a big crowd in which, besides students, were certainly some doubtful characters, coming from the Chinese City, succeeded in breaking through in Rue de Tourane, which is the shortest way to reach the International Settlement, (about 600 or 700 yards). The Northern Police Station, (Avenue Edouard VII) had been informed, (probably an intentional false alarm), that trouble was beginning at the "Big World" and nearly all the men were out. The six policemen who were still there did their best but they were unable on a so short distance to stop the crowd which could reach Avenue Edouard VII and from there get into Shantung and Fukien Roads. There was not, as has been said, want of co-operation, for the two police forces had the same instructions."

World Policy And China

THE Manchester Guardian, a powerful paper, not second in authority and standing to any in Great Britain, which keeps its readers constantly informed on Japanese developments, has some remarks on world policy in China which are worth quoting. It observes that in the dispute between Japan and China at Paris there is little to choose between either side, so that the Peace Conference would do well to stick to essentials. The essential is to put an end to the old struggle for spheres of influence and exclusive concessions, which has gone far to make mock of the open door and destroy the peace and the integrity of China. "What is wanted is a form of international co-operation which guarantees a real freedom of trade in China and emancipates China from foreign ambitions which encourage the worst elements in China to sell their country for private gain. If the old bad system is not now put an end to, and a new system inaugurated, the old will gallop onward. The next world-war may arise out of the Far East, as the present has arisen out of the Near East."—Japan Advertiser.

Labor Movements In Japan

(Japan Chronicle)

It has been a source of great and justifiable pride to the rulers of Japan that they have, in little more than a generation, banished illiteracy from the land; the country may be poor and Oriental, but even if its literacy does not always go very far or reach quite the "100 percent" of the enthusiastic globetrotter, it is seldom indeed in these days that one meets people, even of the humblest station, entirely ignorant of a written language so difficult that one of the old Spanish fathers declared in his despair that it was invented by a council of demons for the exasperation of the faithful. Unfortunately the successors of the great reformers of Meiji have been rather too well satisfied, considering that the reforms were a work complete and permanent in themselves, and have shown in some directions a lack of imagination to realise that they had inevitable consequences. The Constitution is regarded as the final word in popular liberty, the Rescript on Education as an expression of the highest aspiration that man can nurture. One patriotic professor some time ago declared that the Rescript was above all philosophies and creeds. That is a proposition that it would ill become a foreigner to dispute. But philosophies and creeds have this in common—that their teachers seem to think that they supply all needs in themselves, while the taught realise that they create new and higher aspirations. That, indeed, is the measure of their value. And how should a generation which has lived in the light of the Rescript be content to remain stagnant? If it did so it would only show that it had heard it unworthily. But every sign of progress of thought is regarded by men who are still obsessed by Tokugawa traditions as some dangerous importation from without. The pretended leaders of the people are conservatives of the most formal type, and, unable to accomplish progressive thought themselves, they think the people are entirely incapable of any originality of mind. There is great profit indeed in a free trade in thought, but one cannot have popular education without popular ferment, and people who have learned to think do not need to be told that there is such a thing as progress.

But let us come to instances. Although official position and political power are all in a world far removed from the working proletariat in Japan, and though a Labor Party has been forbidden to exist—and hardly seemed to desire existence—there has been a sudden change within the past few months. In reality the change is not sudden. The suddenness lies in its becoming manifest. It had been a tradition that the working man was still in the feudal era, regarding his employer as his lord—though the employer was often sadly wanting in the sense of responsibility that the daimyo felt for his people. Advanced ideas there might be, but the educated men responsible for the administration must naturally have the largest store of wisdom, and the people were bidden wait, and what was good for them would be provided for them. As Japanese, they knew that they were not as other men, and some doctrines held blameless in other countries were criminal in Japan. Mr. Suzuki's attempts to get the workers to cultivate co-operative thrift were regarded with approval, though he was closely watched to see that he did not preach thought as well as thrift. Mr. Tagawa's work among the despised and rejected in Shinkawa was so incomprehensible as to need a vigilant surveillance. Mr. Suzuki at last went to Paris where he could do no harm, and when the Peace Conference included Labor resolutions in the treaty it evolved, the Japanese delegates said that of course things were very different in Japan, to which the others very naturally agreed. Yet while all was calm and the Yu-ai-kai in a state of suspension through its founder's absence, there was a sudden irruption of labor meetings all over Japan. In Kobe a workman in a greasy smock gave an address which showed that his understanding of the situation was at least as clear as that of his far better educated superiors. In Tokio a very stormy meeting was suddenly quieted by the simple eloquence of a girl graduate who took the platform and who spoke for that great army of Japan's superfluous daughters, who are over-worked, underpaid, and Box-and-Coxed in abominable dormitories in the "modern" factories. From a silk district came strange stories of "songs against capitalists" sung by the filature girls, when, like Pippa in the Italian filature, they ought to be singing,

God's in his heaven

This was stopped by the police and some people who circulated the songs on postcards were suitably dealt with. Then again postcards against capitalism have caused perturbation in barracks where they were circulated among soldiers soon to be working again for a living. Naturally the authorities look for the origin of the ferment everywhere but in the right place. Socialism used to be the Evil Thing. Nowadays it is almost a virtue compared with Bolshevism. Officers and men who have been in Siberia are regarded with as much uneasiness as men who have been visiting a fever hospital.

Meanwhile the Yu-ai-kai, like Socialism, has lost its savor, and we have now the Rodo Domeikai—a far more pretentious thing. We have said that the Japanese worker is beginning to think for himself. That is true, but he also finds ideas and definitions ready made for him to express his own thoughts, and when the authorities hear of "direct action" being advocated on public platforms they must regret that they did not make Karl Marx a schoolbook by way of safety-valve. The police unfortunately have a greater dread of "direct thought" than of "direct action." A strike riot causes little perturbation, but such a movement as the Rodo Domeikai the greatest anxiety. It is said that the Kwansai branch (covering Kobe and Osaka), consisting of 5,000 members, have selected from among themselves 200 who are to make a special study of labor problems. They have even retained Dr. Imai, an Osaka barrister and member of the House of Representatives, to instruct them. It has been announced that they will hold their first meeting, Dr. Imai presiding, at the Y. M. C. A. hall, Kobe, on Friday, June 6. Dr. Imai told a Mainichi representative that his pupils are all men of high technical skill and lively intelligence, and are already deeply immersed in Labor literature, while he puts the wages of a few of them, in these high-priced days, as high as Y.600 per month. Nevertheless, they regard themselves as members of the proletariat and are keen on ameliorating the lot of the worker.

The same paper informs us that the Tokio police are in a state of great nervous agitation, and regard the Rodo Domeikai as some sort of Socialist movement. Mr. Oka, the Chief of the Metropolitan Police, does not pretend to any great sympathy. He says that he recognised that Japan must participate in some degree in the general trend of the world's thought, but now that the workers, abusing his indulgence, have become unbridled in their utterance of extremist views, preach a strike war against capital, and "direct action," the Regulations must be put into force and the Domeikai meetings prohibited,—though he allows that meetings for sincere and earnest study are commendable. Apparently he thinks that if there are no speech meetings there will be no growth of extreme views. That, when held by an official so highly placed, is a far more dangerous thought than any likely to be preached on Rodo Domeikai platforms. We conclude where we began, with the reflection that it is a fatal error to believe that all necessary reforms were effected early in Meiji. The Japanese statesmen of today need show themselves worthy successors of the earlier reformers in breadth of understanding and in courage to "take occasion by the hand," for the situation today is as full of perils as it was at the Meiji Revolution.

Art

By Isaac Goldberg

Slowly, deftly, the actress transformed her wan, pale countenance into a flower of glowing beauty. Before her gaze the white lily in the cracked dressing-room mirror blossomed into a smiling peony, and strangely enough, the outward change provoked an inner one. From thoughts of a deep, dull brown her mind leaped to plans of flashing silver. She was no longer a forsaken toy, thrust aside by a sated child of thirty, but a shining star toward which moths flew in ever increasing numbers. She would wring many a man's heart yet—aye, and his purse too. Oh, she was far from being played out yet, was she, whether as actress or woman. She would yet pluck many a flower in the garden of joy. No nun's life for her! And what was more—

It was her turn to appear on the stage. As she came before the public the audience beheld a sad-faced virgin whose cheeks looked altogether too ruddy for her doleful expression. But then, she was to sing the latest popular "ballad"; "It's thoughts of you, and you alone, that have helped to keep me straight." The orchestra was already "vamping" the introductory phrases of the music, and the singer, as was her habit, chose a face in the audience to whom she would sing.

And she sang. Tears choked her voice—ballad tears—and she sobbed the lines with a fervor that can be met nowhere off the vaudeville stage.

Before her, in the fifth row of the movie-vaudeville house, listened Mary Crofts. Who was to know that Mary as she sat there, faced the crisis of her girlhood—that she was inwardly debating whether to yield to temptation rather than endure the grinding monotony of her lonesome, poverty-stricken existence?

Suddenly Mary became aware of the words being sung. Yes, she had some one, too, thoughts of whom were keeping her straight—her dead mother.

And as the singer sang her way through the tearful refrain, wailing mechanically while she thought of the "swell date" she had after the show as a solace for the wealthy deserter, a momentous resolution was formed in Mary's bosom.

She would not yield! God bless that song and the singer of it! She had been saved. She had entered the cheap theater to forget, and lo, she had remembered—remembered her mother and her purity. God bless that song and the singer of it!

Mary emerged from the place cleansed in body and in soul.

What Lloyd George Said About Northcliffe

The Premier's Scathing Attack On His Old Ally

The cables some weeks ago briefly summarised some severe remarks made in the House of Commons by the Prime Minister regarding Lord Northcliffe and his newspapers. The following is a full report of the passage referred to. Mr. Lloyd George was dealing with a telegram which had been sent to him at the Peace Conference on the initiative of Mr. Kennedy Jones and signed by 370 members. The telegram, in effect threatened him with defeat in Parliament if the severest terms, including full payment of the war costs, were not imposed on Germany, and accused him of going back on his election pledges. Mr. Lloyd George indignantly denied that the terms of the peace treaty differed from those outlined in his election speeches, and defined the peace he wanted as follows:

We want a peace that is just, but not vindictive—a stern peace, because the occasion demands it, the crime demands it; but its severity must be designed not to gratify vengeance, but to vindicate justice. Every clause in these conditions must be justified on this ground. Above all, we want to protect the future against a repetition of the horrors of this war by making the wrongdoers repair the wrong and the loss they have inflicted; by punishing the individuals responsible; by depriving of their weapon the nations which menaced the peace of Europe for half a century with a flourishing sword.

Then he challenged the information on which the telegram was founded. Mr. Kennedy Jones said it was founded on an article which had appeared in the Westminster Gazette. There were cries of "Oh," the House believing that the information came in reality from Lord Northcliffe whose relations with Mr. Kennedy Jones are exceptionally close.

Mr. Lloyd George: Oh, really! I wish my hon. friend had explained that to the 370 members. (Loud laughter and cheers.) The reliable source—anonymous, I think—was the Westminster Gazette! (Laughter.) I am surprised at that, but before he gave that answer he ought to have compared notes with Colonel Claude Lowther.

Colonel Lowther (who was received with much laughter): May I say that the telegram was sent only with one object—to strengthen the hands of the British representatives?

Mr. Lloyd George: I never doubted the bona fides of my hon. friend or of those who sent the telegram for a moment. I am complaining of the reliable source. (Laughter.)

Colonel Lowther: Did it do any harm?

Reliable Sources

Mr. Lloyd George: Not at all. I think it will do some good before I am done with it. (Laughter.) Even Ministers have some sources of information. I will tell the House something about reliable sources. (Laughter.)

There were peace terms published in November as a sort of model on which to proceed. In these peace terms there was not a word about indemnity, about the costs of the war. No reparation for lost lives, damaged property—not even at Broadstairs. That was in November. Now we must have everything.

In December hundreds of thousands of newspapers were circulated freely at somebody's expense among the soldiers in France, asking them to return certain candidates. If they had been returned the two peace delegates in Paris now would certainly not have been the Foreign Secretary and myself, but perhaps Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and Mr. Philip Snowden. Who issued that appeal? What reliable source?

At the beginning of the conference there were great appeals to everybody to support President Wilson. All these came from the same reliable source—and now he is attacking all these great ideals. Just a few weeks ago there was a cartoon in one of his papers representing Bolshevism as a mere bogey and me as a person trying to fight the working classes with the mere bogey. Now it is no longer a bogey; it is a monster, and I am doing my best to dress it up as an angel. (Laughter.)

And all is from the same reliable source. That is the last word I would apply to it. Here today; jumping there tomorrow. I would as soon rely on a grasshopper. (Laughter and cheers.)

Some Allowance

I am prepared to make some allowance for even a great newspaper proprietor, and when a man is labouring under a keen sense of disappointment—(cheers)—however unjustified, however ridiculous his expectations, a man in these conditions is always apt to think the world is badly run. (Laughter.) When a man has deluded himself and all the people whom he permits to come near him help to delude him into the belief that he is the only man who can win the war and is waiting for the clamor of the multitude that is going to demand his presence to direct destinies, and there is not a whisper, not a sound, he is rather disappointed. (Laughter.)

It is upsetting that the war is won without him. There must be something wrong, and of course it must be the Government.

At any rate, he is the only man who can make peace. Nobody came near him to tell him so. The only people who got near him challenged him, and contradicted him. So he published the peace terms in advance, and he waits for the call. (Laughter.) But the call does not come. He retreats to the sunny climes—(laughter)—waiting. Not a sound reaches the far distant shores to call him back to his great task of saving the world.

What can you expect? He must feel it. He comes back and says: Well, now, I can not see the disaster, but I am sure it is there. It is bound to come.

In these conditions I am prepared to make allowance, but when that diseased vanity is carried to the point of sowing dissension between great lands whose unity is essential to the peace and happiness of the world; when it is attempted to make France distrust Britain and France to hate America, and America to dislike France and Italy to quarrel with everybody, then I say not even that kind of disease is a justification for so black a crime. (Cheers.)

Everybody here knows it, but it is not the case in France. They still believe in France that the Times is a serious organ. They don't know there that it is merely a threepenny edition of the Daily Mail. On the Continent they really have an idea that it is a semi-official organ of the Government. It shows how long these traditions take to die out. I want them to know what this means. I am doing this in the interest of goodwill, and that is my only apology for taking any notice of the kind of trash of which these newspapers have been full for the last few months.

The Next Step

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir.—The resignation of the trio marks the first true victory of the people, and it is essential that business should be resumed. As to the schools, except those that have already broken up and whose recalling would involve too much trouble, they should also be reopened, and close properly for the summer vacation after due procedure.

But this does not mean that we can quit and leave the government alone. We have still to hold on, otherwise the victory is nothing but another defeat. What should we do?

In my opinion, the first thing we should do is to urge the reopening of the peace conference. Show our demands, never mind what the North or the South contends. We people should voice. Watch the conference. Never let the place be a den for booty division between the avaricious officials and the corrupt politicians. The delegates should inquire what the people want and tell their respective leaders wishes of the people.

The second thing is to frame a solid constitution "of the people, by the people, and for the people." It is a great mistake to leave the responsibility of framing the constitution in the hands of the parliament. Many of the members are ignorant of law. They are incompetent for such a task. Moreover the assigning of the work to the parliament upsets the equilibrium of the three functionaries of the nation. The legislative should no less than the executive be under the constitution, and not above it. The people should elect special men really qualified to draft the constitution. These men are elected only for this purpose, and when their work is done they have to go back to their privacy again. In this case, they can exercise their unbiased views and enjoy unsuspected freedom. When the formal constitution is adopted, we can have a proper reorganisation.

The third thing we should do is to stick to the abolition of the secret pacts between China and Japan, and the treaty of the twenty-one demands. Since the pacts and treaty have not been ratified by the parliament, the propriety of their abolition is unquestionable. We must also insist upon unconditional return of Tsingtau. Of course, when Japan returns Tsingtau and consents to abolish the secret pacts and the illegal treaty we should resume trade with her.

All the above should be taken up right now and the present organisations for the "salvation of the nation" should remain until the above aims are accomplished.

Yours, etc.,

A CITIZEN OF THE REPUBLIC OF CHINA.

Retrospect Of Strike Movement

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir.—During the last few years the spirit of patriotism has been so developed that the people all possess some longing for the betterment of our country. Even the less fortunate classes, those who cannot read, have been brought up to a higher level.

The younger generation that is now under training responded first. Their motive is pure and clear. Their sacrifice is obvious. When once they responded they threw soul and heart into the movement.

The Chinese merchants were all furious against the traitors who are bartering the invaluable property of their and future generations for a mess of pottage. The very fact that the shops all over Shanghai both in the Chinese city and foreign settlement were closed within the short period of a little more than an hour shows that they are ready for the action.

The inhuman handling of the students by the Peking police force formed the spark that set the whole nation afire. It was practically responded to by all educational centers all over the country. Shanghai is by no means the first center to act.

The laborers who are ignorant and have no slightest knowledge of the national disasters went on strike by obeying their foremen whose patriotism was aroused by the merchant class as well as by the students, thinking that it would be shameful for them if they were left behind. Some wished to disturb the peace and order of the community. These people were enemies to us and our cause as well as to the Municipal Council.

Future investigation may show us that some of them may have been paid by our enemies in order to defeat us.

Thank God that the tension is now relieved and the immediate crisis has passed. The people even, the less fortunate classes, have been enlightened to a certain extent. China has taken at least one step toward true democracy. China is behind others but she is moving forward.

W. P. CHEN.

It is the most durable of all decorations, lasting for years with freshness unimpaired, whereas wall-papers deteriorate from the first day by fading and accumulating dust and dirt.

Hall's Distemper is a thorough disinfectant, and is applied directly upon the wall, forming a hard surface, from which dust and dirt may be "spring-cleaned" by lightly sponging with warm water.

An Imaginary Walk Across A Dried-Up Atlantic

By Garrett P. Serviss

Here is an odd question which has a certain geographical interest and which leads to unusual thoughts: "If a genius could find a way to evaporate all the water from the ocean, could one walk to Europe?"

The doubt underlying the question seems to be based on the supposition that the ocean's bottom would be found impracticable for locomotion. As a matter of fact, the bottom of the Atlantic between the United States and Europe consists mainly of a slightly undulating plain, which would offer no topographical difficulties for road-making except along the edges of the continental "shelves," i.e., the submerged fringes, only a hundred miles or so in breadth, which border the continents and slope very gradually downward. When their outer border is reached the descent sometimes becomes steep.

For instance, in going eastward from New York the water deepens very gradually for about a hundred miles to a maximum of something like 600 feet, and then the bottom begins to descend rapidly, sinking in the course of the next ten miles to 3,000 or 4,000 feet. Thus the descent almost abruptly changes from five feet in a mile to 300 or 400 feet in a mile. After that there is still a descent, but more gradual, upon the whole, though, no doubt, with steep places, to a depth of between 16,000 and 17,000 feet in the center of the "western valley" or "trench" of the North Atlantic Ocean.

This valley, sinking more than three miles below the level of the ocean shores, is irregular in breadth, but averages about 500 miles. On its eastern side it slopes upward until it attains the level of the "Central Ridge," which is covered by water averaging only 6,000 feet in depth. This is a remarkably level surface, which has been called the "Telegraph Plateau," being crossed by the principal cable lines. It continues to within some 500 miles of the continental shelf of Europe, where the water again deepens to an average of over 14,000 feet.

There are places along the outer edge of the European shelf where the pitch becomes very steep, as, for instance, to the west of Brest, where the slope is as much as thirty or forty degrees. At forty degrees slope the ascent, or descent would be about 3,390 feet in a mile.

Of course, immediately after the ocean was dried up the bared bottom would be impassable on account of the mud, which is generally deep. But after a sufficient time this would harden and the passage could be made on what, in many places might resemble a friable concrete floor.

In this dried carpet of the Atlantic would be found many interesting things and some of tragic interest. All the secrets of the deep that had not perished would be revealed to persistent search. The lost ships are there, sunk in the mud, consisting principally of the shells of minute or microscopic organisms. The lost treasures would be there, except so far as they might have been dissolved by the water and redeposited in another form.

A thousand forms of creatures never seen or dreamed of by man might be displayed before his astonished gaze. The keys to geology and paleontology might be discovered by expeditions of scientific men descending into the vast abyss of the emptied ocean.

From the bottom of the great "Nares Deep," seventy miles north of Porto Rico, a bottom which it might not be easy to attain, the West India Islands would tower like mighty mountains, and peaks only 7,000 feet above the old sea level would raise their tremendous heads a mile higher than the present elevation of Mount Everest.

One most astonishing effect which might after all make the exploration almost impossible would be the great increase in atmospheric pressure at the bottom of a depression two or three miles deep. The air would be unbearable there and, the temperature perhaps so high as to be humanly unbearable.

At the same time, since all the oceans would be drained if the Atlantic was, the atmospheric pressure over the continents would drop to the rarity found on lofty mountain tops and the huge oceanic basins would be like tremendous cauldrons of clouds, for the greater part of the atmospheric condensation of water vapor would take place at a point below the present sea level.

'Safety First' Bachelors

By Jessie E. Dunbar
(London Daily Mail)

We were talking about the proposed tax on bachelors—Judge Henry Neil (the man who originated Pensions for Mothers in America) and I.

"What would you do to induce bachelors to marry?" I asked. "And would not bachelor's tax mean more bachelors?"

It was then he called them "Safety First" men, pointed out their value, and suggested insurance for them.

I have since asked several business men whether a reasonable Married Man's Insurance against sudden loss of employment through illness or other unavoidable causes, could be arranged, and they say that it could.

The Safety First men are for the most part conscientious individuals with a great desire to discharge their responsibilities faithfully. They have no private means and earn anything from £150 to £600 or even £1,000 a year.

They are men with imagination—perhaps too much. Probably by economising they can save one-tenth of their income while they remain unmarried.

"What sort of safety does this offer to a married man?" they ask themselves.

Marriage means a wife to keep, and perhaps children. Children mean all sorts of expense, and naturally a man wants to educate his children well. This means fairly high school fees.

The Safety First man looks down the vista of years, sees himself suddenly stopped in his career by illness or an accident, and imagines the stricken family—the girls and boys—having to work for unskilled labor wages because he has not been able to complete their training for life, the woman he loves a drudge, disappointed in life and in the future of her children.

"No," says the Safety First man firmly after looking at this mental picture. "No, I can carry on alone all right and we will leave it at that!"

It is no use arguing with him. He is convinced. The only thing is to help him to find a solution of his problem. Singly a man can insure himself against any risk, but in single cases the premium for an unusual risk is high—too high to be of service to the Safety First man. But if a scheme of insurance were floated whereby a man could insure himself against loss of employment at a reasonable rate, made possible by thousands of Safety First men joining in the scheme, that man, if he were a bachelor, would feel that marriage was no longer impossible. His responsibilities would not overwhelm him.

The cynic, of course, will say, "Insure a man against unemployment and he will never work, but will prefer to live on even $200 a year benefit rather than on $400 earned income."

I do not think this true of men with a sense of responsibility, and if there were a committee of other insured men to adjudicate on each case after benefit had been paid for, say, a year, there would be little chance of malingering.

However, mine is a suggestion only, but a practical scheme can be built on it I am assured. And there are two things absolutely certain: one is that our bachelors ought to marry for the sake of our race, the other is that by taxing bachelors we are going to make marriage more difficult for them instead of easier. It is not money we want, but new citizens.

BRITISH ARE PLANNING LIVERY FOR AIRPLANES

Grahame-White Company To Keep Machines For Hire And To Build Special Types

London, May 10.—Aerial passenger service for 1919 at a rate not to exceed sixpence a mile was today predicted to the writer by S. B. Riley, general manager of the Grahame-White Aviation Company, Limited.

When seen this morning at the Hendon works, on the outskirts of London, Mr. Riley said:

"The big thirty-seaters that we are now engaged in manufacturing ought to be able to carry passengers at the rate of a sixpence a mile. They are powerful machines with an enormous lifting capacity and should find favor with the traveling public who want to go the modern way.

"Then we have the little two-seater equipped with an eight horse-power engine. The machine complete ought to market for something like £800 and will make a nice little sky runabout for sportsmen who now burn up the roads in their touring cars or follow the hounds on their saddle horses. At the present time we have orders for a good many of these two-seaters. We shall have many of them ready for delivery soon. Of course they will be given thorough tests before they are sent out from the factory.

"Another type will be the five-seater, equipped with a twin engine. The lounge suite in this machine will be comparatively luxurious and will be heated from the exhaust of the engine. It will not be at all necessary for the passengers to wear the ordinary flying kit that is needed now."

Planes For Rent

"What about the report that you intend to keep machines here for hire?"

"The report is correct; that is our plan. We have had so many inquiries for just this kind of service that we have decided to have a special department given over entirely to handling these machines. It is surprising how many letters we have received on this subject. It is quite within the range of immediate possibilities for a London business man who is enthusiastic about aviation to call us up by telephone from the city and make all arrangements for his trip to Glasgow or Edinburgh or Belfast. On the other hand, the man who sails here from a distant city can have his machine housed here and cared for until he is ready to make the return trip."

"Is your factory back on a peace basis yet?"

"No, by no means. In addition to putting the entire factory on war work we loaned our aerodrome and several buildings to the Government, and barracks were erected to house the Government workers. During the war we greatly increased the size of our plant and the scope of our activities. In that period of stress we built several types—our own design first and then others that were wanted in a hurry. Of course, the boche flyers were anxious to bomb us, but the nearest they came to us was to make one strike out in the middle of the field south of the works."

"What is your opinion of the commercial outlook for aircraft?"

Commercial Outlook Promising

"It is quite encouraging at present. We are beginning to realise the possibilities of traveling by this new way, where the track is ready laid for us. There is one thing, however, that I am afraid of, and that is that many persons without thorough practical experience may begin to dabble in aircraft manufacture. That would be a bad thing, for this reason: If one very serious accident should occur as a result of their dabbling, then the commercial mastery of the air would be given a great setback, from which it would not recover for months. That would be a great blow for the trade.

"We now have our plants equipped for turning out machines in record time, but, with the war over, we must turn to the manufacture of machines for commercial and pleasure purposes or turn to some other line of endeavor. We have greatly enlarged our automobile department, but our chief interests still center around aviation. Much of the future depends on the action of the Government in determining international air-ways. Then, too, there is the customs matter to settle. Until the customs authorities have made complete arrangements, there will be much trouble in promoting international aviation trade."

"Do you expect to continue to train air pilots here?"

"Oh, yes, we shall open our school again as soon as the aerodrome is returned to us by the Government. We had the distinction of having had the first British flying school, and we are proud of the clean record that we made, for up to the present time we have had no fatal smash, although machines are almost constantly in the air in fair weather."

AMERICAN RATES CUT ON OIL FROM FAR EAST

United States Railway Administration's Decision Will Affect Trade Considerably

That the United States Railroad Administration has decided to cut the import rail rate on Oriental oils from Seattle to Eastern points from $1.12½ a hundred pounds to 90 cents a hundred, is the news received this morning by President Robert Bridges in a telegram from C. E. Spens, assistant director of the division of traffic of the Railroad Administration, says the Seattle Daily Times, May 9.

The cut will be made effective not later than June 1, but may be put in force much earlier. The reduction comes as a result of a long series of telegrams which Mr. Bridges, as president of the Port Commission, sent the Railroad Administration. The new rate is to be published as a blanket rate.

"The reduction," said Mr. Bridges in announcing the news, "comes as a great benefit to Seattle commerce, enabling this port to continue in full competition for the vast Oriental oil trade in which we held the place of supremacy during the war period."
